

WILD SILK

The Wild Silk collection is made of real silk, highlighting the versatility of this pure fabric with three distinct types of silk. Each silk in this collection has its own story to tell, with a subtle sheen, robust weave or delicate finesse. Turn your walls into expressive canvases with the luxurious sheen that only real silk can provide. The natural look and feel of this unique, organic fabric adds timeless charm to your interiors. The Wild Silk collection strikes just the right balance between understated elegance and the raw beauty of nature.

Katia Silk

Katia Silk consists of a unique blend of 80% hand-spun Katia silk and 20% cotton. The spun Katia silk is harvested from the cocoons of a wild silk butterfly, after which the short, soft filaments are spun by hand into thick, irregular yarns. A harmonious blend with cotton yarns creates a captivating, contrasting matt-gloss effect. The irregularities in the threads lend this wallcovering a surprising texture and distinctive appearance.

Katia Silk is available in 10 colourways.

Pure Silk

This 100% real silk uses warp and weft threads of different thicknesses. The resulting fabric has a distinctive texture because of the uneven puckers of the weft thread. Loved for their lightweight and lustrous appearance, Katia silk yarns are hand-spun, infusing each fibre with unique artistry and craftsmanship.

Pure Silk is available in 18 colourways.

Ghicha Silk

This design is made from hand-woven silk, which is mainly sourced from silkworms that live in the wild in India. The irregular variations and 'flaws' of labour-intensive, hand-spun silk are part of the unique charm of this stunning natural product.
