KIM MUPANGILAI

KIM MUPANGILAI is a Belgian-Congolese interior architect, sculptural furniture designer, and professor at Parsons School of Design in New York. Her work bridges cultural storytelling and material exploration to create cross-cultural pieces that challenge conventional narratives in design.

Recognised by leading institutions including the Vitra Design Museum, Cooper Hewitt, and the Brooklyn Museum, her work has been exhibited internationally and acquired into museum collections.

In 2024 she received an international design award at the Boghossian Foundation's Villa Empain in Brussels, was named an AD100 Middle East & Africa honouree, included in Objects: USA 2024, and celebrated by Hypebeast as one of the 100 most collectable designers of the 21st century.

MUPANGILAI's practice is rooted in heritage, womanhood, and resilience. Shaped by her Belgian-Congolese identity, her sculptural work explores heritage, material, and form as a personal alphabet. Her design language contributes to an expanded vision of contemporary design – offering a blueprint for future generations where representation and intention are central.
